DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 11/3/08 has been entered.

Claims 21-26 are under examination.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103 Maintained

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 21-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rossow et al. in view of Moormann et al. (J of V 1996 Vol 70, No 2, pages 763-770 from IDS).

Applicant has amended the claims to add the new limitation of "at least 15Kb in length".

Applicant argues that it was unexpected to find that a virus of this length could be produced, that the prior art failed to achieve this length of infectious clone, and that exact 5 prime end was important.

Applicant's arguments have been fully considered and not found persuasive.

The addition of the length of the clone does not change the claim to the extent that the PRRSV is over 15Kb in length and thus already meets this limitation. The rejection of record is maintained for this reason.

For the argument that an infectious clone of this length has not been made at the time of invention is not persuasive because applicant has not shown what in the prior art would not result in the claimed products starting with the deposited virus VR 2332 and that one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention, as pointed out in Moormann et al., would want a full length clone. Applicant points to page 21 of the specification which talks about the cloning strategies and extra analysis required to analyze the 5 prime end clones. The limitations of the cloning methods would be known to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention because the cloning methods predate the invention. Also, in the BEST MODE section pointed to by applicant, the missing nucleotides of the clone discussed in the specification are relevant to that particular clone and it's published sequence, not every clone of PRRSV that is made.

The rejection is maintained.

Conclusion

No claim is allowed.
